

Main Types of Sherry

Fino (Aperitive)

- Very dry and light
- Fresh, crisp, slightly salty

Manzanilla (aperitive)

- A type of Fino made near the coast
- Even lighter and more delicate
- Noticeable salty, sea-air character

Amontillado (Dry meats)

- Starts as Fino, then aged with oxygen
- Medium body
- Nutty, slightly deeper flavor

Oloroso (Hot food)

- Aged fully with oxygen (no flor)
- Full-bodied and rich
- Darker, with notes of nuts and spice

East India Sherry (Dessert)

- A sweet style inspired by wines aged on long sea voyages
- Usually a blend (often includes Pedro Ximénez)
- Smooth, rich, with caramel and dried fruit flavors
